CANDIDATES OVERWHELMINGLY LACK INTEREST IN, KNOWLEDGE OF CURRENT INTELLIGENCE ISSUES

The Security and Intelligence Foundation announces the release of its 1988 NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE ISSUES SURVEY (attached).

The SIF sent its survey, consisting of 11 core intelligence questions the next Congress can expect to confront, to all candidates for national office and is now distributing their responses to its Associates nationwide.

Its purpose -- to attempt, for the first time, to hold Congress accountable to the voters for its increasing administrative, legislative, and oversight roles over the intelligence community and intelligence related issues.

THE RESULTS AS INDICATED BY THIS SURVEY ARE AS FOLLOWS:

- * An overwhelming 76% of the candidates -- House and Senate, incumbent and challenger -- are disinterested in intelligence, security, and related issues;
- * Given a choice of the responses Yes, No, and No Opinion, the candidates choose No Opinion almost 20% of the time: Democrats average 22%, Republicans 16%;
- * Republicans take issue positions favorable to the intelligence community one and a half times more often than do Democrats -- 72% to 47%;
- * Democrats take issue positions unfavorable to the intelligence community more than two and a half times more often than do Republicans -- 31% to 12%;
- * Incumbents -- Democratic and Republican -- are consistently more favorably disposed toward intelligence issues (including decreasing congressional oversight over the intelligence community) than challengers:

Incumbents.....70%
Democratic.....51%
Republican.....74%

Challengers.....65%
Democratic.....45%
Republican.....70%

---

2800 Shirlington Road * Suite 405 * Arlington * Virginia * 22206 * (703) 845-0505

BASED ON THESE RESULTS, THE SIF CONCLUDES:

* Legislators -- actual and potential -- are overwhelmingly disinterested in intelligence and intelligence related issues. Legislators of both parties do not exhibit sufficient knowledge on these issues on which they most probably will be voting -- and in some cases, on which they have already voted.

* Though incumbents are consistently more favorable toward these issues than challengers, their positions are still inordinately influenced by party affiliation. This is profoundly disturbing as intelligence and intelligence related issues, more than any others, ought not to be subject to partisan politics.

* This large number of uninformed and indifferent legislators constitutes a potentially decisive block vote on intelligence and intelligence related issues. This coupled with the tendency of Congress to treat intelligence issues in a partisan fashion lays the ground for the manipulation of issues vital to our national security by a very few individuals.

In summary, the evidence derived from this survey suggests that the Congress should refrain from assuming further influence, authority, or control over the U.S. intelligence community and its operations and, indeed, should consider relinquishing some or even all that it now exercises.

Dear SIF Supporter:

Enclosed is the Security and Intelligence Foundation's National Intelligence Issues Survey.

This is a unique and vitally important document.

It is unique because to the best of our knowledge it is the first and only survey of the intelligence issue positions of all candidates running for election to the House and Senate of the United States Congress. It is also important because of the information it contains and, even more, that which it fails to contain.

More than anything else, this survey reveals the appalling ignorance and/or indifference of our elected officials--both actual and potential--toward the critical intelligence issues of our day. It also suggest that many sitting officials in both the House and Senate hold our national intelligence services in contempt. I regret to say that I believe this suggestion of contempt accurately reflects the attitudes of many members of the Congress.

Finally, it demonstrates beyond all reasonable doubt the critical need for the Security and Intelligence Foundation, and its ceaseless efforts to educate our elected leaders in this absolutely vital area.

But if we are to succeed in this task, we must have your assistance.

I earnestly solicit your financial support so that the Security and Intelligence Foundation can continue and expand its work on Capitol Hill.

Enclosed with the National Intelligence Issues Survey is a business reply card and a post-paid reply envelope. Please use these to send your maximum, tax-deductible contribution to the Security and Intelligence Foundation today.

Thank you so very much.

Sincerely,

Charles S. Via
Executive Director

THE SECURITY AND INTELLIGENCE FOUNDATION

1988 NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE ISSUES SURVEY

DESCRIPTION OF PURPOSE

As part of its Voter Education Program, the Security and Intelligence Foundation is proud to release its 1988 NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE ISSUES SURVEY. Its purpose: to bring select intelligence issues to the attention of all candidates for national office; to ascertain the candidates' interest in and knowledge of these specific issues as well as their disposition toward intelligence matters in general; to report these findings to the voters and to the media.

This effort has a special significance. This is thought to be the first systematic attempt to collect the national candidates' positions on solely intelligence issues and distribute them to the voters so that they may better evaluate the candidates on these vital issues, traditionally kept in shadow. In short, the purpose of this survey, and the surveys that will follow in future election years, is to make intelligence issues a part of the national debate.

METHODOLOGY EMPLOYED

The Security and Intelligence Foundation sent a copy of its survey to all candidates for national office, first on 15 July and again to all candidates who had not yet responded on 15 August. Follow-up calls were made to as many candidates as possible and extensions were given to all who requested them. Every possible attempt was made to accommodate those candidates interested in participating in this survey.

The voter should be warned that the methodology employed here is not scientific nor does it purport to be. Rather, it is an effort to provide an impressionistic assessment of the candidates who will, collectively, constitute the next Congress.

Despite this limitation, the Security and Intelligence Foundation's survey is a valuable source of information on the candidates' positions--especially this election year which the media decries for lack of substance. For additional information, the voter may wish to contact his or her candidates' headquarters. SIF will be happy to provide their addresses, and where possible, their phone numbers, to all who request them.

DESCRIPTION OF QUESTIONS

The survey itself consists of 11 questions based on core intelligence issues previously faced by Congress and that the next Congress can also expect to confront (listed on page 3). The survey concludes with a request for any further comments the candidates might wish to make.

In the complex world of intelligence, there are subtle shadings of opinion that can not always be communicated in single word responses. To accommodate those candidates whose responses do not easily lend themselves to yes/no categories, the Security and Intelligence Foundation has included a key to indicate when candidates provided additional comments. In these cases, the SIF welcomes the voter to contact us for the full text.

SUMMARY INTERPRETATION

Congress' influence over the intelligence community has increased dramatically within the last ten years. This increase in influence should logically have been accompanied by an increase in Congress' knowledge of and commitment to this critical component of our national security apparatus. Our survey results show this not to be the case. Only 24% of the candidates for national elective office viewed this survey as worthy of a response.

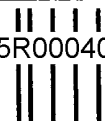

Of those who did respond, only a very few demonstrated a thorough understanding of these intelligence issues. Many demonstrated an appalling ignorance of even the most basic intelligence questions--on which they may soon be voting. Ignorance can be corrected and the Security and Intelligence Foundation is working to do so; many candidates expressed surprise and interest in the issues presented to them in this survey and requested further information from the SIF. Much more difficult to correct are the misperceptions, biases and even willful lack of comprehension on the part of too many of the candidates toward intelligence and intelligence related issues.

There is a solution: Congress must be held responsible for its expanding administrative, legislative and oversight roles over intelligence and intelligence related issues.

On 8 November, the voters will have the opportunity to hold the Congress, actual and potential, responsible.

The Security and Intelligence Foundation hopes that this survey will prove to be of assistance to the electorate as it makes its choice of candidates and casts its votes.

SURVEY QUESTIONS

1. Some members of Congress are considering an FBI Charter that would restrict the FBI to purely federal criminal investigations, eliminating its role in intelligence gathering. Do you favor such a charter?
2. The Intelligence Oversight Act of 1988 provides that the President must notify Congress of all covert actions within 48 hours. This bill has passed the Senate and as of this writing is expected to pass the House. Do you support the adoption of such a bill?
3. Congress' response to allegations of alleged abuse within the intelligence community has been to increase its own oversight role. While strong oversight is necessary and desirable, Congress is very close to assuming management responsibilities. Rather than further increasing Congress' supervision over the intelligence community, do you support internal methods of oversight within the intelligence agencies themselves?
4. To de-politicize the intelligence community, should the Director of the CIA have a fixed term in office as does the Director of the FBI?
5. Currently, the Director of Central Intelligence is also the Director of the CIA. Should DCI become a separate position with stronger budgetary and oversight powers?
6. Do you support the merging of the House and Senate Intelligence Committees into one joint intelligence committee?
7. The FBI's domestic intelligence operations are under the jurisdiction of the House Judiciary Committee. Do you support transferring these responsibilities to the House Intelligence Committee?
8. Thorough background checks, lie detector tests, loyalty oaths, secrecy pledges and other precautions as means of protecting our country's secrets are being abandoned by the government. Do you support the strengthening or restoration of these methods of employee screening for sensitive positions?
9. The broad language of the Freedom of Information Act has been criticized for leading to the inadvertent release of overly sensitive information. Should the FOIA be revised to prevent such disclosures?
10. Under the Federal Tort Claims Act, citizens may sue for alleged violations of their constitutional rights by federal government employees who performed their duties in good faith. Should the FTCA be amended to make the federal government the sole defendant in such cases?
11. Intelligence sources consider Mt. Alto, one of the highest points in Washington, DC, to be a strategic location for eavesdropping on all of Washington, including the White House, Congress, Pentagon, FBI and CIA. Should the Soviet Union be allowed to occupy the embassy it has built on this location?
12. Please include any further comments you would like to make concerning this questionnaire, the role of intelligence in our national security, your assessment of the U.S. intelligence community, intelligence issues of the future, etc.

KEY

Y = yes    N = no    X = no opinion

* = Incumbent    R = Republican    D = Democrat    I = Independent    L = Libertarian    O = Other

1. Candidate provided additional comments. Please contact SIF for text.
2. Candidate's response does not fit into a yes/no category. Please contact SIF for response.
3. Candidate's responses do not fit survey format. Please contact SIF for text.
4. Candidate provided a statement in place of survey responses. Please contact SIF for text.

NOTE: Because the primaries in some states fell after SIF's printing date of 15 September, candidates were included in this survey who are now no longer in their race. Please contact SIF if you are unsure of your state or district candidates.
